The issue of the underachievement of some boys in the UK and indeed across the developed world is something that is not going away. The negative labelling of boys and up to thirty more barriers to achievement are clearly responsible. The session covers an explanation of the barriers and looks at effective ways of breaking them down from pre-school onwards. The session covers engaging boys in writing, speaking and listening and reading, developing emotional intelligence, engaging parents, combating peer pressure from nursery onwards, providing the right kind of environment and teaching and learning styles that hit all the buttons for boys without disadvantaging girls. Never mind “Boys will be boys””Boys will beBrilliant!”
