Short Breaks

This document will tell you about short breaks for adults with disabilities who live at home with their families. This means they can go and stay somewhere else for a short period of time.

This allows carers and other family members to take a planned short break from their caring role.

What is a short break?

A short break is a break from the routine of caring. It is planned and is not the result of an emergency, crisis or illness.

It usually is to help give your carer a break from helping with your support.

Some examples of short break are:

Residential and nursing homes

This is a care home that has people living there all the time but they have some room for you to come for a short bit of time. This is where there are staff on shift and they will help you with your support.

Short break units

This is where you go to a service run by the Council which is set up just to help people with short breaks. This is where there are staff on shift and they will help you with your support.

Shared Lives scheme

This is where you would go to someone's house for a short bit of time. This means that you will stay with their family and they can help with your support.

'Sitting' services

This is provided by an organisations that can give you support in your home for a short bit of time. It sometimes means that you can have different staff come to help you with your support.

More options are:

Going on holiday and using your money to pay for someone to go with you.

Have a Personal Assistant (PA) look after you in your home.

How do I get a short break?

You must live in Nottinghamshire. People who live in the city need to contact Nottingham City Council.

Your carer will need to have a carer's assessment, if you haven't had one then they should contact the Council.

You will need to have a care and support assessment to look at your needs.

The 2 assessments together are used to identify your needs and the impact that this is having on your carer and their quality of life.

These assessments will decide if you or your carer will be offered a personal budget for planned short breaks.

This can be paid by the Council to the short breaks service or you can have it as a direct payment. This money can only be spent on your short breaks.

You might get an NHS Personal Budget that will pay for planned short breaks. You will need to be registered with a GP in Nottinghamshire for this.

The number of weeks of planned short breaks will depend on your needs and the impact on your carer.

A Council worker will work with you and your carer to make a plan around short breaks.

What about the Council's services?

The Council has 3 short break services that people can use. You have to book these but they are open all day, every day.
