

Support for Special Educational Needs

This easy read document tells you about our SEND Local Offer for children with additional needs in education.

Special Educational Needs are learning difficulties or disabilities that make it harder for children to learn than most children of the same age.

What is support for special educational needs?

This support is for children and young people with additional needs, not just with an Education, Health, and Care (EHC) Plan.

Children with special educational needs are likely to need extra help or different help from that given to other children their age.

If you have a special need or disability your school or college should provide support for your learning.

The support should meet your needs and have positive outcomes.

How do I get this support?

Children learn at different speeds and in different ways.

Teachers should think about what will work best for the children they teach.

If the school says your child has special educational needs and they think they need more help and support, they must talk to you about this.

If you are worried about how your child is getting on at school, start talking to their class teacher or form tutor. You can also ask to speak to the Special Educational Needs Co-ordinator (SENCO).

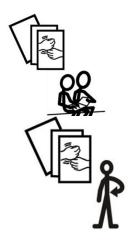

A SENCO is the teacher responsible for special educational needs in school.

It is a good idea to write down the things you talk about and write down all the times you contact school.

You might need help to do this so talk to the people that support you. This could be family, friends, or paid support.

The school's SENCO will work with parents and class teachers to plan what to do.

This plan is called an Individual Education Plan (IEP).

The plan shows the extra support your child needs.

The support works in 4 steps:

1. Assess

This assessment is to find out what the child or young person's needs are.

The young person, child and their parents or carers should be involved in the assessment.

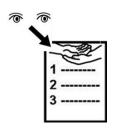

2. Plan

This is how the school will support the child or young person.

3. Do

The child or young person will get support to meet their needs.

4. Review

Checking to see if the support has worked and thinking about what to do next.
